Introduction to climate dynamics and climate modelling

Chapter 3. Modelling the climate system . 3.1 Introduction . 3.1.1 What is a climate model ? In general terms, a climate model could be defined as a mathematical representation of the climate system based on physical, biological and chemical principles (Fig. 3.1). The equations derived from these laws are so complex that they must be solved numerically. As a consequence, climate models provide a solution which is discrete in
